

Just 5 Tickets for Commencement—

All of C.U. Grad's Fans Can't Go

The cheering section just isn't large enough for one group of fans at graduation ceremonies for the Creighton University School of Pharmacy Monday.

"I can only get five tickets," said Wallace Langdon, Jr., 32, of 2853 Fowler Avenue, president of his graduating class.

He has eight children.

Mr. Langdon attended Creighton in 1949 but dropped out after a year.

Then there was service in the Coast Guard. This was followed by several years on the road as a salesman—"detail men" they are called in the pharmaceutical line.

But for the past several years it has been a real grind—full-time work in his father's drug store at 4902 Military Avenue, a heavy class schedule at Creighton and long hours of study.

"I felt how important it was to get a degree and made up my mind to do it. My family has been wonderful about it. They seemed to understand."

And so—while they won't all be there—summa cum laude to Richard, 11; Regina, nine; James, eight; Tommy, six; Timmy, five; Mary, four; Patrick, two; Colleen, four months. And, of course, Mrs. Wallace Langdon, Jr.
